Inspire India's campaign to make youth strong, skillful and socially conscious

Dr. Mallika Sarabhai to launch Inspire India's TAPAS

TAPAS is a nationwide campaign by Inspire India for rural and urban youth.

TAPAS is a campaign to make youth strong, skilful and socially conscious. An estimated 100,000 young people aged 13 and above will experience TAPAS this year.

Dr. Mallika Sarabhai, one of the world's most inspiring and celebrated women, will launch the TAPAS campaign in Hyderabad, at an exclusive event on the 30th of July 2010.

The aim of education must be the formation of character and not just acquisition of knowledge.

The aim of all education must be the formation of character and not just acquisition of knowledge.

Acquisition of knowledge is important but its effectiveness in an individual's life is contingent on character. In large part, educational institutions in India have done and are continuing to do a great service to the nation, despite being harassed and weakened by several societal forces of greed, vanity and commercialism. There is a great need for civil society to feel responsible and act to augment the work of educational institutions to build a stronger youth for our nation. A need for all society to act in cohesion.

India being a country with the world's largest number of young people now and in the future, the character of our young people will be critical not only for the progress of Indian nation but also the progress and well being of the entire world. A world that is growing in crime and immorality, a world that is losing compassion for fellow humans, a world that is increasingly becoming consumption oriented, greedy, vain, and intolerant. The children and young people who will inherit our legacies will need stronger and greater character to face this world. The need for character is greater today than ever before.

This need must be met.
